

PERSONAL DATA PROTECTION SEMINARS

The Personal Data Protection Seminars are not your typical Identity Threat prevention module. These seminars educate the overseas travelers and allow them to protect themselves before they leave and to monitor the information and data that can be used against them while in country. Personal data that can allow someone to rob them one year later, long after travel is over and data that can be gathered and used against them while conducting business that may lead to an assault. Subjects also cover available open source data banks and allows the traveler to know just what is known about them before they leave and give them the tools to erase as much as possible from the public view.
